UNIVERSAL HISTORY, BOR LADIES.

MR ROSS proposes to begin his COURSE of LECTURES on UNIVERSAL HISTORY, for LADIES, on Tuesday the 10th of December next, at One o'clock.

PART I. Containing the History of the World, from the Creation to the commencement of the Christian Æra, to be delivered this season.—Tickets, One Guinea each.

The Ladies who attended this part of the course last year, are respectfully reminded, That the first Meeting, in which he is to resume the sequel, was fixed for Tuesday the 8th of January, attwelve noon.

he is to resume the sequel, was fixed for Tuesday the 8th of January, attwelve moon.

Mr Ross also proposes, in consequence of the advice of persons in whose judgment he has confidence, to open a CLASS for HISTORY, for LADIES and GENTLEMEN; to meet three tunes in the week, viz. Tuesdays, Thur, lays, and Fridays, at seven in the evening.—The Course will last something more than three months. than three months.

seven in the evening.—The Course will last something more than three months.

Ladies and Gentlemen whom this plan may suit, will be pleased to send for their Tickets as soon as convenient; and if a sufficient number shall be called for before the first of January, intimation will be given respecting the time of commencement, either privately or by a future advertisement. The method in which the subject is to be treated, and the facts which are to come under review, may be seen from an Outlink or Table of Contents, which is now printing, and may be had in a few days from Mr Syrmigton, in the Parliament Square.

The advantages of the study of History are so generally known, and so universally acknowledged, that it is unnecessary to mention any of them in this place; nor will the writer of the present advertisement presume to offer any thing in recommendation of the Course which he now proposes to deliver, any further than to assure those who may have thoughts of attending any of his Classes, that it was the impression which he felt of the importance of the subject which led him to engage in so arduous an undertaking; that the same consideration animated and supported him in the prosecution of it through many difficulties; and that nothing in his power shall be wanting to render the subject both entertaining and instructive to his hearers.

The acre, at an average, contains about 3500 cubic feet of measurable wood, and 6000 running feet of Pit wood. The measurable wood is only valued at 6d per cubic foot, and the Pit wood at one farthing per foot. The Forest is situated within a mile and a half of the sea, and a good road is now making and pier building for the more readily transpirting the wood when cut, for which purpose a proper time will be allowed. The Forester will shew the premisses; and the articles of roup, with a plan of valuation of the Forest, are to be seen in the office of Mr Bruce, depute clerk of Session, and Robert Watson, writer, Park-sstreet, agent in the Sale, will fuinish intended offerers with printed copies of a report of the value and different lots of the Forest, and give any other necessary information.

The Sale of this Wood has at different times been unavoidably delayed, but the Exposers have reason to believe that it will proceed on the day advertised.

Several large Dutch Indiamen and other ships, which it was impossible for us to remove in their present state, but which might have been fitted out as ships of war by the enemy, were completely disabled and rendered uscless for any further purpose, through the exertions of a detachment of scansen, under the direction of Capt. Bovar. The desire of complying most strictly with the Articles of the Agreement entered into between his Royal Highness and General Brune, prevented their Vice-Admiral Dickson, as well as myself, made it our study to comply in this, as in every other instance, with the Articles of the Agreement, and I must do the French General the justice to say, that he seemed actuated by the same spicit. Provious to quitting the Helder, I had, in obedience to his Royal Highness's instructions, discharged every just demand of the inhabitants of the country which has been occupied by the army; and I was happy to find that very few claims were brought forward beyond those which it was in my power to satisfy.

The embarkation of the troops, difficult from the multiplicity of the arrangements required, and sometimes arduous from the state of the weather, was carried on with the utmost zeal and activity by Vice-Admiral Dickson, and the officers and earnen under his command. I feel particularly indebted to Captain Lawford of his Majesty's ship Romney, who was left on shore, and had the immediate direction of the embarkation, for his exertions and his attention to every branch of his Majesty's service, and to Captain Woodriffe, Principal Agent of the Transport Service, for his great zeal in the execution of the dusties of that situation. ties of that situation.

Having perfectly at our disposal the sea dykes, both towards the Ocean and the Zuyder Zer, as well as the interior dykes, we should in that case be reduced to the terrible necessity of inaudating the whole country of North Holland, and of adding to this calamity every destrictive evil which must necessarily result from an attempt to force or interrupt our retreat. We should, under such circumstances, also be constrained to make use of the ample means we possess of rendering the navigation of the Zuyder Zee henceforth impracticable, by obstructing the Mars Diep, and by destroying the Nieuve Diep; works upon which so many years labour, and such immense sums have been expended. Our system of carrying on war having on all occasions been governed by the most liberal principles, necessity and the strongest sense of duty could alone induce us to adopt a system repugnant to the sentiments which have ever directed the conrongest sense of duty could alone induce us to adopt a system pugnant to the sentiments which have ever directed the con-set of the English nation. From these considerations, and from our persuasion that Ge-

October 1799, the 8th Year of the French Republic.
THE Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the English THE Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the English army, proposes that a cessation of hostilities shall take place, in consequence of the approach of the inclement season. He promises to withdraw from the Batavian territory, between the present period and the end of November next, the whole army under his command; and consents that no damage shall be consulted, no sluices opened, or dykes broken up, on condition of his retreat not being molested by the French and Batavian army.

Batavian army.

These motives would not have been brought forward by the These motives would not have been brought forward by the Duke of York, if he had considered himself possessed of means sufficient for advancing into the country; for in that case he would have had the facility of extending his quarters, of procuring subsistence, and, in short, of placing himself beyond the reach of the inconveniences arising from the unfavourable season. We ought consequently to look to advantages in an arrangement, proportionate to the insufficiency of the foran arrangement, proportionate to the insufficiency of the forces under his command.

The terms proposed by the Duke of York contain nothing but what would be the necessary result of a cessation of hostilities. It can scarcely be supposed that the Duke of York will cause the dykes to be destroyed, the country to be inundated, and the villages to be burnt, for the mere purpose of committing such acts of violence; as such conduct would be contrary to the laws of war, and must draw upon him the reprobation of all Europe and of his own nation. It appears therefore evident, that the Duke of York would confine himself to such measures as might be useful to his own army, or detrimental to ours: but we look upon such accidents as inseparable from a state of war. No object of advantage to us appears therefore to result from the proposals which have been made.

Head-Quarters, Schagen Brug, GENERAL, October 17, 1799.

I SEND back Major-General Knox with my answers to the explanatory note which he has delivered to me in your name. He is fully authorized to conclude on my part upon every point which relates to the subject of his mission.

FREDERICK, Duke of York,

Commander in Chief of the combined English and Russian army.
To General Brune, Commander in Chief.

Head Quarters, at Schagen Brug,
October 17, 1799.

HIS Royal Highness the Duke of York, Commander in Chief of the combined English and Russian army, proposed to General Brune, Commander in Chief of the French and Baravian army, an arrangement equally to the advantage of both parties, originating in his desire to prevent the further efusion of blood, and to preserve this country from the terribl effects of an inundation, as also from the destruction of the best of its ports, involving the total ruin of the principal channels of its interior navigation and commerce.

In answer to which General Brune observes, that he cannot

In answer to which General Brune observes, that he cannot imagine his Royal Highness will recur to measures not less revolting to humanity, than repugnant to the character of the British nation, and to the general feeling of all Europe.

Devastation or destruction is certainly incompatible with the character and with the uniform conduct of the English nation; and as little do either accord with the disposition of his Royal Highness the Commander in Chief — but there are duties peremptorily prescribed by the nature of particular situations, the odium of which must fall, not on those who execute, but on such as render the measures necessary, by rejections the condisuch as render the measures necessary, by rejecting the condi-such as render the measures necessary, by rejecting the condi-tions of a just and honourable agreement.

Deeply impressed with what is due to his country on the one hand, and to the claims of humanity on the other; persuaded, likewise, that General Brune is equally guided by these senti-ments, his Royal Highness has taken his proposals into conside-ration, and consents to abide by the agreement as it stands in the Answers annexed to the different Articles.

the Answers annexed to the different Articles.

Major-General Knox, who is charged therewith, is authorised to sign and conclude this agreement, as well as to arrange any points of detail which may arise out of it.

It being the duty of every officer commanding his Britannic Algority's troops to make an exact report of whatever relates to his command, his Royal Highness the Duke of York will of course lay before the British Government every communi-cation which has taken place between his Royal Highness and General Brune.

SIR,

Alkmaar, Cet. 17. 1799.

I HAVE seen General Brune, and have talked over with him fully all the articles on which I have received his Royal Highness's instructions. I have found the greatest disposition on the part of General Brune to enter fairly into the subject. In respect to the essential article of the fleet, General Brune has already received a letter from the Dutch Directory, to make the delivery of it a sine gas non; and I much doubt when there is any chance of his being brought to give way on this point, at least without some assurance that his Royal statement would for ward the demand to his Court.

In respect to the other very essential article of the prisoners, after much conversation, I brought the General to lower his demand to 8000 men, beyond which he cannot recede. Every other point can be amicably settled.

In Horne Tooke's late examination before the Commillioners of income tax, the following interrogatory and reply is faid to have paffed :-

Com.—" Pray, Sir, inform us by what means a gentleman, who has no property of his own, is enabled to live in the manner in which you do?"

Answer .- " By three: begging, borrowing, and fleating : now which of these may be applicable to my case, is for you to determine !"

It appears from the depositions of the wives of the two Buil Porter's men, who were reported to have died of a contagious diforder, that they had both been employed in removing the household goods of one of them during a very rainy day; that in the evening they drank a great quantity of strong brandy and water, with which they became intoxicated to a very violent degree.—
This, together with the colds they had caught by being wet, was the occasion of their deaths. In addition to which, one of them, whose wife was brought to bed on that day, and whose deposition was taken from her in bed, declares, that her hufband told her, the sheets he flept in at a lodging house were very damp. The men died on Tuesday morning, and their bodies were opened on Thursday night in the presence of several surgeons. Their death was occasioned by inflammation in the cheft.

The following anecdote is mentioned as having contributed to the return of Buonaparte :- An Englishman, who quitted Europe a short time after the 30th Prairial, to serve in the army of Sir Sidney Smith, Prairial, to ferve in the army of Sir Sidney Smith, was fent by the latter with a flag of truce to Buonaparte. Berthier received him, and having answered his meflage, the conversation turned upon the events of Europe. It is but a short time, said the officer, since I quitted England, and perhaps I can give you news of France which has not yet reached you. He then related that Italy was reconquered by the Russian and Austrian armies; that Switzerland had been also conquered by Prince Charles; and he told him likewife of the famous 30th of Prairial. Berthier knew nothing of all this; he was struck by the recital of what thing of all this; he was ftruck by the recital of what he had heard, and presented the Envoy to the General in Chief. Buonaparte learnt from him catastrophies, and from that day his departure from Egypt was refolved on.

OFFICE OF MINISTER OF GENERAL POLICE. Extract of a letter written by the Minister of General Police to the Central Officers, relative to Theatrical Exhibitions. " Paris, Nov. 17

"In the succession of parties which have by turns disputed the supreme power, the Theatre has often resounded with unprovoked insults on the conquered, and base flattery towards the conquerors. The present Government abjures and disdains the resources of faction; it wishes for nothing from them; it will do every thing for the Republic. May every Frenchman agree in the same disposition, and may the Theatres second their influence. Let the sentiments of concord, the maxims of moderation and wisdom, and the language of great and generous passions, he alone dedicated to the stage. Let nothing which may divide the minds of men, fomeno their hatred, and which may divide the minds of men, somenotheir hatred, and prolong melancholy recollections, be tolerated there. It is time that all who are within the Republic should be Frenchmen. Let him be punished who would provoke reaction, or dare to give the signal; for re-actions are the fruit of injustice and feebleness in Government—They can no longer exist among us, since we have a strong, or what is the same, a just Government."

The Government is daily receiving the most liberal offers of assistance. "Praise," says Roederer, "is never wanting to bad governments, but solid offers of money are only made to good ones."

EDINBURGH-NOVEMBER 28.

The London Courier received this morning has the following observations: The Confuls of France have departed from that fyftem of moderation and mercy with which they commenced their career—Surpaffing their predeceffors, who banished Carnot, and condemned Bartermy, Pichegev, and others to a lingering death in the pestilential climate of Guiana, but who yet made use of the legistature to fanction the oppressive act; the Confuls, as we are informed by the Paris papers to the 22d inst.

which are received, have by their fole power, without any communication to the shrunk and shapeless skelt inso of the two Councils, ordered thirty-seven individuals to be transported to Guiana, and twenty-two to be impribe transported to Guiana, and twenty-two to be impri-foned at Rochelle. Upon fuch a measure there can be but one opinion-that it is an act of the greatest tyranny and injustice. The right of trial upon an acculation brought against a man, is a right which, upon no consideration, and under no circumstances, ought to be in-

If there really was a conspiracy against the State, the more folemn and open the invelligation, and the more public the proof, the more complete and fatisfactory would have been the justification of the late revolution.—And who are the persons to be transported or imprisoned? Without doubt they are the men against whom all France exclaims? The Merrins, the Rew-Not one of them. All these enjoy impunity and pro-tection, rioting in the pleasures of the capital, and re-velling in the spoils of their country. And, strange to relate, the men of the most note, and the most violent Jacobins, against whom the revolution was principally directed, are not those who are to be sent to Guiana, but to be imprisoned at Roche

The mind recoils with loathing and difgust from such a scene. Is BUONAPARTE ambitious of being a second SYLLA? There is some resemblance between the characters of these two men. Sylla's fame in war, his courage, his profuse exactions from the enemy, and his liberality to his foldiers, obtained the confidence of the army; with the merits he had acquired in war, he repaired to the city, and cliamed the Consulate; he atributed his fuccess to his fortune, which he frequently invoked; he returned from the army to reform the State; the republic had been corrupted—he harangued the foldiers on the injustice of those who had gone before him; he altered the government—he had his lifts of profcription, more deadly and numerous, certainly, than BUONAPARTE's-he was fond of men of letters and was of a studious habit, Here the similarity ends. SYLLA had a formidable rival in MARIUS, and after having obtained the fummit of his ambition, he abdicated the Dictatorship .- BUONAPARTE has promifed to do the fame .- Will be perform his promise? He recollects, perhaps, that power so obtained is not likely to be permanent-" Non Cinnæ, non Sullæ, longa domina-

The good that SYLLA did by some of his reforms did not compensate for the evils which his example produced; and the manner in which he made himfelf mafler of the Republic by his army, and the fecurity with which he held his userpation during pleasure, had a more powerful effect in exciting a thirst of dominion, than the political uses which he made of his power, or his magnanimity in religning it, had to restrain or to correct the effects of that dangerous precedent. It is, perhaps, in the nature of these frequent convulsions to

The Government is daily receiving the most liberal offers of assistance. "Praise," says Roederer, "is never the same says and as the Romans did, quietly submit at the despotic government of a single person.

The military intelligence in the Paris papers is of sittle importance. The army of the Rhine has, as our readers know, met with a check, which has forced it to raise the blockade of Philipsburgh. On the 5th there were some strengthes, in which the French were forcessful. There was an affair on the 11th, in the Rhecefsful. There was an affair on the 11th, in the Rheinthal, in which the French had also the advantage. No armistice appears to have been concluded, though there are rumours that fuch an event is to take place.

The Confulate follows a curious line of conduct .-On the one hand they endeavour to conciliate the affec-On the one hand they endeavour to concluste the affections of the people by repealing obnoxious laws, and "permitting," though they have not yet enacted, "freedom of religious worship," and priests to be released from consinement.—On the other, they have acted exactly the same despotic part which their predecessors did, in An aid-de-camp of General Knox came over in the

Extract from the Report of the Committee for managing the Soup Subacription, at Birmingham, dated Nov. 30, 1798

The great success which attended the sale of Good Meat Soup at one penny per quart, with a large alice of bread, during the last winter, icaves no room to doubt but a liberal subscription will be opened this winter, for the same truly charitable purpose, as no plan is likely to afford such general relief at so small an expence. A penny laid out at the soup shop, will go as far as twopenee or threepence, laid out in the common way, which circumstance particularly recommends this benevolent plan to public notice, it being very desireable to relieve the necessities of the poor as extensively as possible, and this can only be done by uniting charity with economy.

PRINTER OF THE CALEDONIAN MERCURT.

WHEN I saw the Createat Review amounced for publication, the design appeared to me presumptuous and mischievous; itsiexecution has infliciently vimileated the truth of my opinion. The first number contains a gross misrpresentation of a sermion preached by one of the worthy Ministers whom I regularly hear. I was truly shocked when I read it. The account of the sermion was so take and absurd, that it appeared to me as if intended to expose the prescher to ridicule, rather than give an idea of what he had said.

But of this, Sir, I shall say nothing more, as Dr Davidson has published a very proper and spirited answer to it in all the newspapers. My design at present is to take notice of a similar treatment which they have given in their second number, to a neighbouring clergyman, Kir BUCHANAM, who officiated for Dr Davidson when he was confined to the house by a severe family affliction. I am persuaded, Sir, that every candid person who heard him that afternoon, will join me it thinking, that the account which they have given of at, is totally different from the sermon he delivered. Indeed I do not think that it contains one single sentence of it.

What they give as the heads of his discourse, are quite different from those which he announced, and, although the illustrationa contain some of his sentiments, yet they are so misplaced, so differently expressed, and so mismed with jargon of their own, that I should not have known them to belong to his sermion, if they had not told us. To what is this to be ascribed? Either the person employed to report the discourses delivered in the Tolbooth Church must be ignorant and stupid, altogether unfit for his office, or the Reviewers must have a design to exhibit in a fool's dress every Minister who appears m that Pulpit.

As I have not heard any of the other discourses which they commend anost, I do think the preachers entitled to very little of the commendation they bestow upon them. Indeed, Sir, I am astonished that the Clergy of Edinbu mend most, I do think the preachers entitled to very little of the commendation they bestow upon them. Indeed, Sir, I am astonished that the Clergy of Edinburgh do not take some step to put a stop to a publication, worthy only of a Besiety of Illuministi, calculated to bring into discredit the established Teachers of Religion, and to hold up the most respectable characters of the country as objects of ridicule and contempt. Is not this conduct deserving the notice of the public prosecutor?

I hope, Mr Printer, that a regard to justice and to the characters of worthy and respectable individuals, will induce you to give this a place in your useful Paper, and in so doing, I am confident, you will oblige all impartial men, as well as your humble servant,

ADDRESS FROM SIR JOHN DALRTMPLE,
BARON OF EXCHEQUER,
To the Inhabitants of Edinburgh, Glasgow, and the Surrounding Towns.
Groine an Assent of his Sabritutes for Soap, Tallose, Oil, Pot ash, and other fixed Alkalis, used in Bleaching, Washing, an Scouring: and also of a New Species of Food, in the present

SCOTLAND, and, I am afraidthe other two kingdoms, being threatened with a scarcity, it is the duty of every one to suggest what he can to save expense to the poor, and even to the fich, in order that the saving may be applied to purchase

With this view I suggest two savings of expense. One relates to the price of Soap; and the other to a new article of

FIRST ARTICLE-PRICE OF SOAP.

I am possest of two discoveries secured to me by patents—One toniusts of substitutes for fallow and oil it making of soap; and the other of substitutes for fallow and oil it making of soap; and the other of substitutes for porash, and other fixed alkalis; ati of which stricles, to the exclusion of all others, have been hitherto thought absolutely necessary in bleaching, washing, and scouring, particularly in washing, either in public washings, or in washing by private families. I communicated the discovery of the substitute for potash lately to the bleachers of Paisley and Glasgow; and two of them from amongs the most eminent. Mr Semple and Mr Monteith declared to a meeting of the bleachers in the Tontine at Glasgow, that they had made the substitutes, had used the substitutes on a large scale; that they did the work to which they were put perfectly well; and, in proof of their ophilons, informed the meeting that they were going to stop their bleachield works, which are very great, and eniploy them in making the substitutes for the bleaching, washing, and scouring interests, in and around Glasgow and Paisley.

The saving proposed by the discovery is upon an average, 33 per cent of the Parsent Price of the Materials URED and Bleaching, washing, and scouring interests, in and around Glasgow and Paisley.

To bring matters this length at Glasgow, cost me much time, vexation, and disappointment, because it is difficult to do business with large bodies of men at distances from each other. But here, at Eduburgh, who use washing, are pressing to disminish their expences in the hour of threatened famine; and, therefore, I have taken a shorter way to open the eyes of the public at Eduburgh than I did at Glasgow; and in less than

But here, at Eduburgh, I am more lucky. There are no bleachers or securers to treat with here; but 100,000 people I and round Edinburgh, who ase washing, are pressing to diminish their expences in the hour of threatened famine; and, therefore, I have taken a shorter way to open the eyes of the public at Edinburgh than I did at Glasgow; and in less than one month from this date to make people certain whether I be mivraken or not mistaken, when I say that the present materials of wishing can be diminished in Edinburgh and round it, to the extent above mentioned.

Sh James Stirling, Lord Provost of Edinburgh, to whom the public has great obligations in this business, told me, that to give fair play to a five Invention, some creat Prestic act or Notoniett of scrudi matter of nace washing substance, and the expense of making it; in order to make people certain whether I could keep my word with regard to the saving proposed; and therefore advised me to send as much of it to the Charity Work House, in which there are 400 people, at would do the work of a week's washing for the House. I instantly sent the quantity required, and went to the House with Lady Dowager Dalrymple, who having three sons fighting for its all, naturally grasped at an idea, which was to supply soidiers and seamen at a cheap rate with an article conductive to cleanliness, and consequently to the health, sprits, and activity of fighting men, often cooped up in barracks, ships, and forts, and these often in hot climates. We found two sensible decent gentlewarien: One the housekeeper, the often the mistress landtess. Two days were spent in performing the week's washing by a number of the washers of the house, and the report was in the following words:

"Charity Work House, Edinburgh, 1916 Nov. 1799.

"Sir John Dallrymple, at the deaire of the Lord Provost, naving sent us as much of his washing liquor as would comcomplete a week's washing of the clothes and hedding of this house, the washing was done for two days under our own eyes by the washers of t and Mr Herdman, the bleacher, in order that either of them might wash the substitute in the presence of the Council.

I informed the Town Council that each charity endowment within their bounds could make the washing substitutes for itself within itselt or one for them all: that I should send my operator, Mr Crooks, (one of the most ingenious, modess, and worthy men living.) to teach a confidential person or two in each house to make them: that I should not ask a penny of premium for the use of the patent, or profit of any kind during the present scarcicy, which I should suppose to last for a year: that if the Town Council, with assistance of the Presbytery would make up a list of indigent persons, particularly of those whose husbands or fathers have fallen on the coast of Holland the working substitute might be made for them in one of the charity endowments, without any premium to me; and that charity endowments, without any premium to me; and that I was to make the same offer at Glasgow, and in the different parishes in which I have estates. The only return that I asked was, that the charitable endowments should make reports of the merit of the washing substitutes, keep exact accounts of the expence of making them, and lay both on the table of the Town Council from time to time, in order that the number of the Town Council from time to time in order that the number of the Town Council from time to time in order that the number of the Town Council from time to time in order that the number of the town that the number of the town the lie might know what price ought to be put upon the substitute as well as I did.

I am very certain, that after 50 per cents are saved to the charity endowments, by making the substitutes there, a considerable saving will still be made; and I shall be happy if that saving shall be applied to the use of the keamen, who, to the shame of a Creat Government, like that of England, have no shame of a Great Government like that of England, have no regular supply of soap alloted by the public to them.

There is one thing which I forgot to say to the Town Council, and yet it is of some consequence to the enquiry to which I am so amious to submit. The washers have an interest to continue to wash with the old common soaps, and not to wash with my substitutes, because the common soaps being of a more solid consistance than such of my articles as are soft, (for one of mine is as hard as yellow or white soap,) it is easy for the washers to ship a piece of the common soaps into their (for one of mine is as hard as yellow or white soap.) it is easy for the washers to slip a piece of the common soaps into their pockets, which they can not do with such of mine at least as are of a more liquid consistence. I do not believe they will do so, because the poor will spare the poor—But it is best to expose none to temperations; and therefore I propose, that all those who chuse to wash with my washing substitutes may give such additional reward to their washers as may make it more their interest to be honest in using my articles than to be dishonest in using the articles now in use.

I addid, that though it would be more for my benefit to communicate the discoveries to all who would pay for the use communicate the discoveries to all who would pay for the use of them; yet it would be better for the Public to confine the making of the substitutes to men of character, who would have a vanity and an interest to attend to the quality of arhave a vanity and an interest to attend to the quality of articles of such consequence entrusted to them; whereas, if it was given to all who asked it, those who got it would undersell each other, by rivalship would raise the price of the materials of which the substitutes are made, and from eagerness to grow rich, would weaken the qualities of them; and therefore, that if the reports from the charity endowments answered expectation, I should leave it to the Town Councils to name expectation, I should leave it to the Town Councils to name two or three of their number who might make the articles for the rest of the community, and that I should leave the terms of my premium to be adjusted by the Lord Provost for the time being, and a friend named by me. How easily this trust may be executed by those to whose hands it is committed, will appear from the following facts.

The towns of Edinburgh and Leith are said to contain 70,000 people. Suppose each of them to cousume 10 lbs. of soap in a year (which is a very large allowane.) the community would be 700,000 lbs and these reduce to tons, went a be 312 tons in a year, or about a ton a day. The boiler, which I saw at the Charty work house, appeared to contain about a hogshead, and could not have cost 10l. This vessel would shead, and could not have cost 101. This vessel of my washing substitutes ten batches in a day, and fore, with the addition of the lid and pipe, value 20s.

make of my washing substitutes ten batches in a day, and therefore, with the addition of the lid and pipe, value 20s. and a couple of the bid people in the house to attend it, would produce double of what the two towns could consume.

Two furnaces to keep in a simmering heat, a few boilers to make ten batches a day of the white soap, (the whole of which apparatus need not cost 20cl.) would make enough of washing liquor to supply a million of people in and round London, every day in the year, and could be used three days after making. The washing tould be performed in every private house in London, because my substitute has no bad antell in washing; or fine scents could be added to it. One kind of the white soap is as hard as yellow soap, but whiter, and the other house in London, necessary washing; or fine secrets could be added to it. One kind of the white soap is as hard as yellow soap, but whiter, and the other kinds, which are of a liquid consistence, are as white as creaming If I succeed in Glasgow and Edinburgh in this plan to ascertainty and the price of an article of the last necessity.

If I succeed in Glasgow and Edinburgh in this plan to ascer-tain the merit and the price of an article of the last necessity to you all, it is my intention to follow it up, and to extend it to all the great corporations and great seats of manufacture in the kingdom, to whom I shall make the very same offers which I do to you in this address.

I have confined this lester to the weshing part of business because there is little bleaching or scowing business round Edinburgh, and because the people of Glasgow and Paisley know burgh, and because the people of Glasgow and Paisley know well enough the advantages which will accrue to their bleaching business, from the discoveries. And the advantages to the bleaching and accuring interests, will soon be known in a separate way to the cotton and will not counties of England, because I have applications from them to send up kegs of the substitutes, with portable models of the apparatus, and my operator Mr Crooks.

When these interests are unled the following terms of the country terms of the country terms.

When the three interests are united the following advan

ges will follow:

and of pot-ash and other first alkalia. Thirty-three per cent so and of pot-ash and other fire alkalis. Thirty-three per cent sa-ved to the people and manufactures of the chief materials of those three branches. Health, spirits, and activity given to the scamen, by enabling them to wash their raiment and bedding in cold salt sea water. The same blessing to our soldiers, and which may be extended to the armies of our allies; it being well known, that nothing contributes so much to the powers of military and seafaring men as cleanliness. A new and productive revenue got from a new subject, which from its chapness will bear a tax, and from the extent of its consumption which allows. in cold salt sea water. The same blessing to our soldier cheapness will bear a tax, and from the extent of its consump-tion which always bears a proportion to cheapness, will en-crease the produce of that tax. The price of candles, (so ne-cessary for the peor and most kind of manufactures) diminish-ed, because the tallow now wasted on soap, will prove a sup-ply to make candles; and as cheapness encreases consumption the produce of the candletax will be increased in proportion for potash to make the washing liquor, (though there be not ograin of fish soap in it) are uncalculable; and therefore I mus grain of fish soap in it) are uncalculable; and therefore I must be excused for dwelling upon 'them. The common way of washing at sea is, to spread the substances to be washed on the deck, put soap upon them, water the soap, and rub them hard with rubbers. This has three bad effects. 1st, It wastes much soap, which sticks to the cloth. 2dly, The rubber tears the cloth. 3dly, The soap remaining in the cloth makes it clammy, and stops the perspiration of the wearer. Whereas my washing substitute being washed with suds and by the hand in the common way of washing, wastes none of the substitute, tears none of the cloth, and carrying off the whole of the suds in washing with the hand, leaves nothing on the cloth to stop perspiration. If the seamen would agree to it, the first washing should be with two thirds urine and one third cold salt water, in order to loosen the grease and oils from the substance to be washed, and particularly from woolers.

water, in order to loosen the grease and one from the substance to be washed, and particularly from woolem.

There is a lorge boiler in the King's brewhouse at Wapping in which, with the addition of a small one, Government might make my washing liquor for 100,000 seamen yearly, for 72221. Ios. exclusive of daties, that is seventeen pence half-penny for each man, at the high allowance of a pound of soap per month to each man. I know what I am saying. My calculations are in the hands of persons who ought to attend to them, and will attend to them. And I peril my character that they are just.

At the same place, and at the same expense, the same provision and saving could be made for every other man. who car ries arms in his country's cause. No doubt this would impain the perquisites of the pursers of ships, and serjeants of regi ments. But the public should indemnify them, otherwise the will fall upon ways and means to defeat the whole plan.

To give all fair play to my ideas, I have communicated, or shall communicate them, to such of the Cabinet Ministers as I have the honour to know, to Lord Spencer for the sake of the seamen, to whom he is a brother; to Mr Windham for the sake of the soldiers, to whose interests he is a firm friend, to be communicated by him to the Duke of York, who is a brother to them; to Lord Liverpool, who with the eye of ar eagle, saw the advantages of the discoveries in all then varieties; to Mr Pitt for the sake of the new revenue, to be got from the application of the ideas; nd to the Chance the Duke of Portland, and Mr Dundas, because they know theirduty to have their eyes and ears open to every thin theirdaty to have their eyes and cars open to every thing which can promote the public welfare.

It may be thought, that instead of applying to corporations or ministers, I should have applied to the great body of soapboilers. I answer, I am not to blame; I was not so blind to my own interests, as not to see, that the soap-boilers were the most proper persons to execute improvements in their own business, which I could not; that they were a respectable body, who paid a great tax to the State, and that their emmity was dangerous. I courted them, almost to meanness; I desired a meeting with such of them as I knew, who were near meethey declined it; I wrote to such as were at a distance; they answered not. I endeavoured, at public meetings, and in publications, to show them that I was their best friend, by presenting to them cheap materials, and increase of markets at probleations, to show them that I was their best friend, by bresenting to them cheap materials, and increase of markets at home and abroad, on account of that cheapness; that a small profit on a great trade was better than a great profit on a small trade; and that I should probably leave to themselves the adjustment of terms between them and me for the communication of my patents. Lord Livintroduction in writing to the soap Lord Liverpool gave me a general did not avail me. These things, however, I regard not; I ascribe them to that jealousy of trade, which, as the great Adam Smith says, "has done more injury to trade, than all her enemies put together." If it be thought more for the interest of the public, that the business be in the hands of the soap-boilers, rather than of the corporations, I will be ruled by the public, give the use of the patents to every soap-boiler whom the Treasury approves of and leave terms between them and me to the Treasury. Or, i and leave terms between them and me to the Treasury. Or, if the thought more for the public interest, that the whole nation have the use of the discoveries, I will throw upmy patents to morrow for an equitable compensation from Parlament. I said so, when I was examined by the Fishery Committee of the House of Commons, and I repeated it in a letter which I wrote six months ago, to Lord Spencer and Lord Liverpool jointly jointly

It may appear odd, that I have not in this address explained what the materials of my substitutes for peash and other fixed alkalis are. The reason follows:—If the secret of the materials and composition could be kept, the British islands would have a superiority in the bleaching, scouring, and washing businesses, over all countries in the world, except India, and perhap even over India; and, if the business had been put into the hands of one or two hundred soap-boilers, (which might be done by having different parts of the apparatus in different rooms,) it might have been kept from all nations. But, the soap-boilers, forced me, by their bal humour, to protect myself by patents, and consequently to record the specifications, some boilers, forced me, by their hall humour, to protect myself by patents, and consequently to record the specifications, that is to say, the description of the materials and composition. However, it is perhaps not yet too late. If it be within the prerogative of the Crown, or the power of the Chancellor, to stop giving copies of the specification at the Record, it may be done, and I have not been so negligent as not to suggest it. It is not likely, that any copies as yet have been taken out, except by the Publisher of the Repertory of Arts. But, if he has done so, he is too public spirited a man not to throw it into the fire; and he will very well deserve to be remunerated for doing so.

doing so.

Complaints have been made against my fish soap as a sub complaints 1 ave been made against my non soap as a substitute for soaps made of tallow and oil. I owe it to myself and the public to clear this matter up. When I stated the nature and merits of the fish soap to a general meeting of bleachers at Glasgow near a year ago, I had not then bethought myself of finding out a substitute for potash; but when I did,

I resolved to stop the fish soap till I should see if I could bring them both forward together; and accordingly I did stop it.—
But Provost Stewart of Edinburgh, having pressed me for leave to make that soap in the mean time, I could not refuse a man at once respectable and unfortunate. Unluckily for me, he, being no chynnist, did not know that if the leys were made in an oaken cask, they would draw the estringency from the in an oaken cask, they would draw the estringency from the oak, and discolour goods in washing; and having as a wine merchan a number of oak casks on hand, he made the leys in these casks, and the soap so made, was sent to the trustees fo these casks, and the soap so made, was sent to the trustees for manufactures at Edinburgh, and to many persons at Manchester. The servants employed committed also some misrakes, (a thing not to be wondered at in a new manufacture), and as I am told, too high a price was put on the soap. These things threw a cloud upon the fish soap for a time, but will never happen again. Two of the most eminent bleachers at Glasgow, Mr Semple and Mr Monteith, declared to the meeting a fortuight ago, that they were using no other soap, offering to show their books to prove the fact. While there, I saw five tons bought in a public Warchouse, and a sixth the day after; and Mr Ballantine at Leith, engaged to make the fish soap for the Glasgow and Paisley gentlemen, for 3d per lb. exclusive of the duties which they nearly draw back.

But no vessel or cask is to be trusted, unless it has the stamp, subscription, and number of John Crooks to it.

But it is fair to the Public to inform them, that the fish soar is best for bleachers, and the white washing substitute best for

SECOND OBJECT-NEW FOOD

In trying different substances from which soap might be made, it occurred to me that one of these might be bones, on account of the quantity of marrow in them. The way which I found best, was to grind them to the size of small nuts and then to boil them in a digester till all the marrow. row came out of them. But in grinding the bones I fell upon a discovery which may be of great use at the present time of scarcity. For having begun at first with grinding them to a very small size, I found that in boiling in the digester, they melted into a nutricious substance, which when mixed with yemelted into a nutritious substance, which when mixed with vegetables, made an agreeable and hearty soup. The cost of the bones and of the grinding will be a trifle, I presume not above 30s. or 40s. a ton.—If the last, it will be about a farthing a lb. This nutriment may in times of scarcity be of use in great cities, where great quantities of bones are thrown away. I took the making of soap from bones into my patents. The soap was good and cheap, but the public may be assured I shall turn none into soap as long as the present scarcity lasts.

I have seen the Alms House at Lyons, which is the greatest in the world, because Lyons is a thoroughfare to the north-west parts of Europe, from the south and south-east parts of it.

in the world, because Lyons is a thoroughfare to the north-west parts of Europe, from the south and south-east parts of it. One lb. of coarse flesh per day, was allotted to three persons, with a lb. of bread and a lb. of legumes (particularly of the kail and cabbage tribes) to each. The bread was baked to a crust, and as well as the meat and legumes, was divided into small parts. All three were simmered in ressels larger than hogshead, on a slow fire for three or four hours; by which the juices of the flesh, and of the legumes, incorporated themselves with the bread crust, so that the mass was composed both of li-quids and solids, and therefore was doubly nutritious, palata-ble, and healthful.

I looked a few days ago into one of the charity soup boil ers in Edinburgh. I saw no toasted bread, few legumes, and neither the flesh nor the bread were divided into small pieces; so that the mass could have neither the nutritious, nor the p latable, nor the healthful qualities of the French comp But, neither the French nor the Scottish boilers had th improvement which I point at, of being in the form and on the principle of a digester. In an open boiling vessel, half of the liquor, and consequently of the juices, evaporates, and is lost But, in a digester, almost the whole of the juices are preserved. But, in a digester, almost the whole of the juices are preserved; and by the continual rotation of rising from, and falling back into the boiling vessel, insinuate and incorporate themselves into the more solid parts simmering in the boiler.—I propose no expence; the present boilers may be turned into digesters, by putting a lid on the top of the boiler, and a perpendicular pipe in the lid, wider at the bottom than the top, in order that the liquor may condense or fall back the more readily into the receiver, and the action and reaction of the valves will secure the vessel against bursting. The expence of the whole nece

Readily embrace the opportunity your letter affords me of adding my testimony to that of the Lond Chief Banow in favour of your WORM MEDICINE, my clost son having, a few months ago, derived very material benefit from the use of it. He had been unwell for several weeks previous to his taking it, appeared pale and emaciated, was languid, and complained frequently of pains in his head and side.—The Lord Chief Baron, who had accidentally seen him in this state, fortunately recommended to me the trial of your Worm Lozenges; and that no time might be lost, or any mistake occur in obtaining the genuine medicine, sent me three diseas of it. The first of these occasioned a visible amendment; and after the second dose every unpleasant symptom disappeared—but I judged it right to give the third, as the two former had agreed so uncommonly well. From that time my son has had agreed so uncommonly well. From that time my son habeen in perfect health; and I certainly attribute his cure who been in perfect health; and I certainly attribute his cure whosly to the efficacy of the Worm Lozenges. I have since recommended your Lozenges in several instances, wherein I have the satisfaction to assure you they have uniformly been of great service. we the pleasure to inform you, that your WORM Lo zenges have performed a most wiraculous Cure on my eldest son, who for some months had been troubled with worms son, who for some months had been troubled with worms, which excited a very dangerous illness, and having been given over by every medical Gentleman who attended him, I expected nothing but his dissolution, when a friend of mine, who had just come from London, advised me to try the effect of your Lozenges, which he said were in very high repute, and had performed many extraordinary cures, and presented me with some which he had brought with him. I yielded to his persuasion, and found my son much benefited by taking them twice, and by persevering therein he is completely cured. You will oblige me by making this as public as possible, for the benefit of others in the same situation.

hedges, and ditches. On the property there is between 30 and 40 acres of fine thriving young plantations of different kinds of wood, and also two pigeon-houses. The post road leading from St Andrew's to Crail runs through the cleate, which is distant from St Andrew's four miles, and from Crail five miles, and is in the close neighbourhood of the thriving and populous villages of Kingsbarns and Boarbills. The post-goes every day from St Andrew's to Crail, and returns in the evening.
A complete new manison-house and offices have been built within these four years, on a neat and genteel stile, and the house lately painted.—It confits of dining-room, drawing-room, parlour, seven bed-rooms, kitchen, laundry, scullery, with various other conveniencies; there is abundance of excellent water in the back area conducted in leaden pipes. The house is beautifully fituated on the banks of the river Kenley, commands extensive prospects of the country, the goaft of Angus, and of the German Ocean, and the garden and orchard are well stocked with the best kinds of fruit trees.

The lands and mills are all fet to tonants upon leafes, excepting about 30 acres in the hands of the proprietor. Upon the expiry of the leafes, a very confiderable encrease of rent may be expected; the flour and barley mills are almost new, and the machinery of the very hest confirmation; the command of water is very great; scarcely an instance has occurred of these mills being stopped either in winter or summer for the want of it; the stination is peculiarly well adapted for the crection of mills for the manufacturing of cotton yarn, &c. both on account of the fall of water, and being in the neighbourhood of the villages of Kingsbarns and Boarhills.
